

Thesis Statements

What is a thesis statement?

- It presents the main idea of the essay.
- It should be contained in one sentence.
- Generally, a thesis statement is at the end of the first paragraph.
- A perfect thesis statement should identify your topic, your claim, and the key points that you will use to support your claim.
- In simple terms, a thesis statement is the merging of the topic and your opinion.

Topic

what the essay is about your own insight or assertion about the topic

With that in mind, you ought to consider what our topic is this Unit. Our essential question is “How do humans and animals interact?” Therefore, our topic is...

→ Human and Animal Interaction

Now, what is your opinion about human and animal interaction? Think about your own interactions with animals. Think about the podcasts, essays, videos, and articles we have read all unit. Now, what can you say about human and animal interaction?

Human & Animal Interaction

What am I thinking about human and animal interaction these days?

Animals and Humans help one another.

Always have. Always will. The relationship is mutually beneficial. Capiche?

Animals help humans more than we help them.

From being therapy dogs to lifelong companions, our pets provide us more care than we can return.

Humans have made pets' lives much more comfortable than vice versa.

If humans could, we would nap twenty hours a day, too.
Where is my soft pillow and blankie?

Animals tolerate us, but our time at the top of the food chain is about to crash and burn.

My cat will overthrow the government. I just know it. It is in the judgy eyes and unceasing stare.

Now, you will formulate a thesis statement of your own. You might imagine “I believe that” at the beginning of the statement to help you get started, but do not actually write those three words down. By the nature of what a thesis statement is, it is already inferred as a belief of yours. Compose below.

(Based on what I have read and my own personal experiences, I believe that) _____

The end...for today.
